

Two Hungarian Professors Visit GSA

Dr. Mavis Acheampong, Prof. Eva Leitter and Prof. Istvan Pocsi

Two Hungarian Professors from the University of Debrecen, on Monday, May 26, 2025, paid a visit to the GSA to explore Ghana's strategies against aflatoxin and the work the Authority has been involved in, in the fight against the aflatoxin menace.

The Professors are Prof. Istvan Pocsi and Prof. Eva Leitter, who were hosted by the School of Agriculture, University of Ghana.

They were received by the Authority's PR and Marketing teams after which they were briefed about some activities of the Authority.

The Professors then made a presentation on the aflatoxin and antifungal protein research in Hungary where they took staff of the Authority through the work they have done so far on the subject.

They visited the Mycotoxin and Histamine Lab where they were taken through practical aspects of the Authority's activities in aflatoxins.

The Professors expressed their excitement at the work GSA had done so far and said they would like to collaborate with the Authority to share knowledge on how to fight the menace.

Prof. Istvan Pocsi making a presentation

Dr. Mavis Acheampong, Lecturer, University of Ghana

Prof. Istvan Pocsi

The Hungarian Professors touring the Mycotoxin Lab

